The old art school in Maputo, ENAV is moving during this summer (Xmas) Holiday. All staff and a number of students have been carrying things over to the new premises. It is not that far away. A good solution, but earlier there were ideas to move the school out of the city center to a location close to the airport. It is important for an art school to be located in the middle of town, especially when it is really the only old art school of Mozambique.

This is naturally changed now when we also have ISAC, the university level academy for the arts and design. That is located in a very good campus on the outskirts of town. In a sense a pity that the academy is not in town as well, but at least the campus is absolutely great as can be seen on the many images that I have posted on my websites.

The images here show the moving activity, the putting up of the exhibition and the opening.

I have also collated a number of images in an album here. Facebook is a place where one can put info, but here I like to document the activities that I encounter here in Maputo.
